HITLER CALLS REICHSTAG SESSION FOR DISARMAMENT DISCUSSION

YORKSHIRE DEFEATED BY CAMBRIDGE

All-India Player Takes 7 For 58.

SUSSEX WIN SECOND ENCOUNTER

Close Finish At Bristol

London, To-day.
The most sensational result in the mid-week cricket programme was provided at Cambridge where the Light Blues defeated Yorkshire, County Champions, by 19 runs.

Aided by Jehangir Khan, the All-India Test player who remained in England at the conclusion of last year's tour, the University secured their first win over Yorkshire in the last ten years.

Jehangir Khan, who concluded the Indian tour with 53 wickets at a cost of 29.05 runs apiece, was responsible for Yorkshire's second collapse, his share being 7 for 58.

Yorkshire drew at Oxford after the Dark Blues had scored 277 and rain had prevented further play.

Sussex, last season's runners-up, found Clark, the Northants' left-handed fast bowler in very fine form, but, aided by splendid batting by Bowley (105) and Cook (97), and magnificent bowling by Wensley (9 for 113), the southerners secured their second successive win of the season.

Gloucester, another challenging southern county, opened their season with a narrow win over Kent, very fine bowling by Goddard, a potential Test player, dismissing Kent a second time 8 runs short of the home county's total.

Kent secured a lead of 55 on the first innings mainly due to excellent trundling by "Tich" Freeman, who took 8 for 48—the best analysis to date. A hurricane century by Barnett, however, changed the whole complexion of the game.

Scores as cabled by Reuter were as follow:

COUNTY CHAMPIONSHIP
Middlesex beat Hampshire by 2 wickets at Lord's.
Hampshire: 261 and 83 (R. W. V. Robins 7 for 36).
Middlesex: 230 and 120 for 8.
Lancashire beat Worcestershire by an innings and 96 runs at Blackburn.
Worcestershire: 180 and 138 (Iddon 6 for 44).
Lancashire: 414 for 9 dec. (Watson 185).

Essex beat Warwickshire by an innings and 4 runs at Edgbaston.
Warwick: 210 (H. T. O. Smith 6 for 44) and 200.
Essex: 414 for 5 dec. (O'Connor 122 not out).

Gloucestershire beat Kent by 8 runs at Bristol.
Gloucester: 168 (Freeman 8 for 48).
Kent: 223 and 228 (Goddard 6 for 71).

Sussex beat Northants by an innings and 94 runs at Hove.
Sussex: 354 (Bowley 105, Cook 97, Clark 8 for 89).
Northants: 101 (Wensley 5 for 66).
159 (Wensley 4 for 47).

FRIENDLIES
Cambridge University beat Yorkshire by 19 runs at Cambridge.
Cambridge: 248 and 72.
Yorkshire: 159 (J. G. W. Davies 5 for 47).

142 (Jehangir Khan 7 for 58).
Oxford University drew with the West Indies at Oxford.
Oxford: 189 and 287 for 7 dec. (F. G. H. Chalmers 149).
West Indies: 150 and 150 for 4.

8 POWERS AGREE TO TARIFF TRUCE

ALL NATIONS INVITED TO SUBSCRIBE

PRELIMINARY MOVE TO ELIMINATING WORLD TRADE RESTRICTIONS

LONDON, TO-DAY.
THE ORGANISING COMMITTEE OF THE WORLD ECONOMIC CONFERENCE YESTERDAY AGREED TO THE AMERICAN PROPOSAL FOR A TARIFF TRUCE, WITH A NUMBER OF RESERVATIONS.

A communique issued by the Organising Committee of the World Economic Conference after the meeting yesterday under the chairmanship of Sir John Simon, British Foreign Secretary, strongly urges all other Governments participating in the Conference to agree to the tariff truce, retaining the right to withdraw from the agreement at any time after July 31, giving one month's notice to the Conference.

The Chairman was requested to communicate with all the other Governments participating in the Conference, inviting them to adhere to its terms without delay.

The tariff truce resolution not only relates to tariffs, but also to quotas and similar trade restricting measures. It leaves the nations free to pursue any existing policy. Thus, the United Kingdom can seek further trade agreements.

Owing to the existence of large stocks of primary commodities, such as wheat, overhanging the already flooded markets, the eight Organising Committee Powers passed a resolution with reference to the draft agenda of the Conference, in which the preparatory commission experts spoke of the limitation of exports for the improvement of the level of prices.

BRILLIANT TENNIS BY CUBAN PAIR

Canadian Reverse In Doubles Game.

AUSTRALIA AND GREECE IN WINNING POSITIONS

London, To-day.

Canada received a rude check to their Davis Cup aspirations yesterday when their doubles pair lost their match to the Cubans after securing the first two sets in a convincing manner.

Canada, however, are expected to win their way to the North American Zone Final.

Australia, as expected, encountered little opposition against Norway, and Greece secured a commanding position against Roumania in the other Second Round tie in the European Zone.

Canadian Reverse.
Hot Springs, Virg., To-day.
Sensational play featured the Davis Cup doubles match between Cuba and Canada here yesterday.

Leading by 2 matches to love and having secured the first two sets in the doubles match Jack Wright and Marcel Rainville were expected to give Canada entry into the Final Round of the North American Zone, where she will meet the United States. Morales and Randall, however, played superb tennis to win the third set at 6-4, the fourth at 6-4, and the fifth at 10-8 after a titanic struggle.

Canada, however, are expected to win both the remaining singles matches to secure a 4-1 triumph. Scores were as follow:
Morales and Randall (Cuba) beat J. Wright and M. Rainville 4-6, 0-4, 6-4, 6-4, 10-8.

The Organising Committee, therefore, make it clear that action forced by sharp falls in prices during the Conference, would not conflict with the truce.

It was generally agreed that if sudden steep movements occurred, for instance, in the pound and dollar exchange, it would probably be necessary to call another meeting of the Organising Committee. — Reuter.

It was recognised among the members of the Organising Committee that good faith in the essence of the resolution which has been adopted, and which constitutes a "Gentleman's agreement."

The resolution comes into immediate effect by the signatories.

Fuller Details Of Meeting.

URGENCY OF REMOVING PARALYSIS TO TRADE

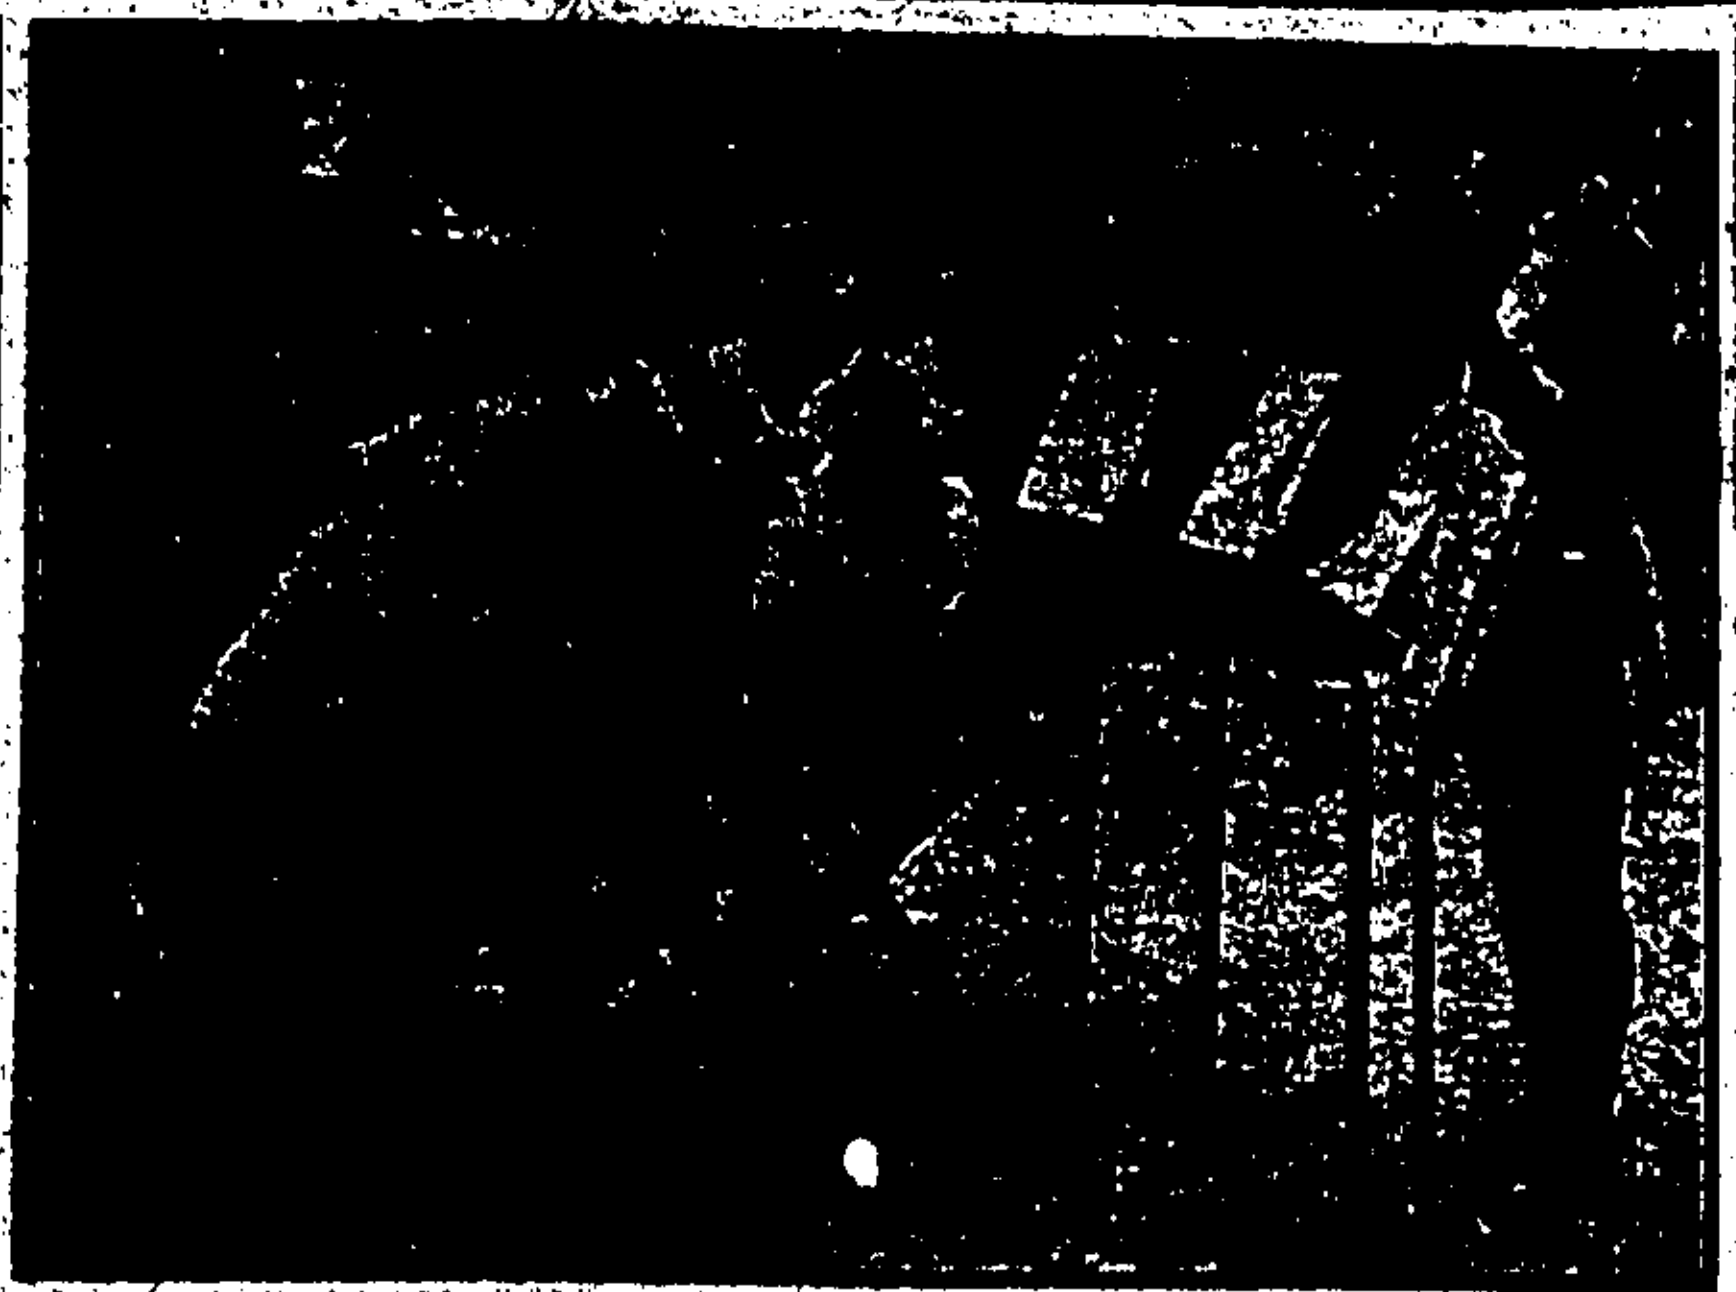

London, To-day.

A communique issued at the close of the meeting of the Organising Committee of the Monetary and Economic Conference, which met at the Foreign Office yesterday afternoon under the chairmanship of Sir John Simon, to consider the proposal for instituting a "Tariff truce" in relation to the impending World Conference which is to meet in London on June 12 under the presidency of Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, states:

"All members of the Organising Committee were represented, viz. Germany by the German Ambassador, Herr Von Haesche; Belgium by the Belgian Ambassador, Baron de Cartier de Marchienne; United States of America by the American Ambassador, France by the French Charge d'Affaires; Italy by the Italian Ambassador, Signor Grandi; Japan by the Japanese Ambassador, M. Matsudaira; and Norway by the Norwegian Minister, M. Vogt.

The committee had before them the following resolution, which was unanimously approved:

"The Governments of the United Kingdom, Germany, Belgium, United States of America, France, Italy, Japan and Norway represented on the Organising Committee for the Monetary and Economic Conference agree that it is essential for the successful conclusion of the conference that measures of all kinds, which at the present time indirectly and paralyse international trade be suspended, pending the opportunity for the Conference to deal effectively with the problems created thereby.

NANKING INDIGNANT AT C.E.R. SALE

Russia's Offer To Sell Resented

"MOST DEPLORABLE AND REGRETTABLE"

Nanking, To-day.

All shades of opinion in the capital are most indignant at Mr. Litvinoff's admission that Russia is willing to sell the Chinese Eastern Railway, especially as only two days previously Mr. Karakhan was reported to have assured Dr. W. W. Yen, Chinese Ambassador to Moscow, that the Soviet had no intention to offer the Railway for sale.

Official quarters say they cannot understand Russia's "change of attitude."

A typical view is that M. Litvinoff's statement, following on the heels of the resumption in Sino-Soviet relations, can only be regarded as "most deplorable and regrettable." — Reuter.

CONVERSION LOAN TENDERS.

$50,000,000 Issue Over-Subscribed.

London, To-day.

Tenders for the $50,000,000, 2 1/2 per cent. conversion loan 1944-1949, and Treasury bills, were opened yesterday at the Bank of England. The total amount applied for was $78,900,000.

Amounts allotted were: in conversion loan, nil; in bills at three months sight, $49,445,000.

For bills at three months sight, to date from Monday 10 Friday, applications at $99/18 and above were allotted in full, and those dated Saturday at $99/18/1 and above, in full.—British Wireless Service.

SILVER DECLINES ON WALL ST.

Far Eastern Selling Causes Weakness.

New York, To-day.

Far Eastern selling caused weakness in silver on the New York Stock market yesterday. After the decline of 125 points in Wall Street became effective, silver was offered freely on advance.

Shares in general showed little fluctuation on Thursday's prices, but Markets E. A. Pierce and Company, in their daily report, advised traders to be prepared for all eventualities. Business was well above average, 4,500,000 shares being dealt in.—Reuter.

HARBIN EDITOR'S DEPORTATION

British Consul Lodges Protest.

MR. LENOX SIMPSON

Harbin, To-day.

It is learned that the British Consular authorities here, pending instructions from the British Legation in Peking, have strongly protested to the Manchukuo Foreign Office against the projected deportation of the British editor and publisher of the Harbin Herald, Mr. Lenox Simpson, on the ground that such an action would be a violation of British Treaty rights.

Meanwhile three of Mr. Simpson's Russian employees are now under arrest, being charged with printing Communist propaganda. Mr. Simpson, who is the brother of the famous "Putnam Weale," who was killed by mysterious gunmen in Tientsin, is alleged to have published anti-Manchukuo and pro-Communist writings.—Reuter.

FARM RELIEF BILL

President Roosevelt Signs Measure.

U. S. TO RAISE AGRICULTURAL PRICES

Washington, To-day.

President Roosevelt yesterday signed the Farm Relief Bill.

The Farm Relief Bill empowers the Secretary of Agriculture to try to raise agricultural prices to the average level of 1909-14, for wheat, corn, cotton, rice and dairy products and to the average level of 1909-14, for tobacco, by taxing "processors" such as millers, spinners, weavers and refiners.

London, To-day.

H. M. the King has approved the appointment of Sir George Clerk, British Ambassador at Constantinople since 1926, to be Ambassador at Brussels and Minister Plenipotentiary at Luxembourg, in succession to Earl Granville, who is shortly retiring.—British Wireless Service.

NAZIS' COUP IN DANZIG

Trade Union Offices Seized.

NO OPPOSITION TO POLICE AND STORM TROOPS

Danzig, To-day.

The seizure of the Trades Union headquarters here by local Nazis, and the hoisting of the Nazi flag, passed off quietly. There was no opposition, and no disturbances occurred.

The seizure was accomplished by three lorry loads of police and two detachments of "Storm Troops."

No action is to be taken by the authorities as it is entirely a civil matter. The town remains quiet.

The step has met with popular approval and will undoubtedly affect the elections. — Reuter.

FRENCH ASSASSIN SUSPECT

President Lebrun's Escape.

ARMED DEMONSTRATOR ARRESTED

Paris, To-day.

The prompt action of the police possibly saved the life of the French President, M. Lebrun, while he was opening the new thoroughfare, Avenue Paul Doumer, here, yesterday.

A man in the crowd, making a noisy demonstration, was taken to the police station, where, a search revealed that he was carrying a revolver.

The man's name is given as Etienne Lacoste.

He is believed to be an ex-Communist, who for a long time was a resident in Russia. He is now, apparently mad. — Reuter.

President Doumer, whom the street was named after, was shot by a Russian assassin, and died from his wounds on May 7, last year.

The French Ambassador yesterday conferred with President Roosevelt for half an hour at the White House regarding war debts. Details of the conversation are not available.—Reuter.

TO DEFINE GERMANY'S ATTITUDE

Chancellor To Reply To Lord Hailsham.

VERSAILLES TREATY MAY BE DEFIED

Berlin, To-day.

Chancellor Hitler is expected to define Germany's attitude on Disarmament at the meeting of the Reichstag next Wednesday, called by the Cabinet.

The announcement of the meeting of the Reichstag has created intense interest in political circles, as it is realised that should the Disarmament Conference collapse, Germany may be confronted with a grave decision as to whether she should declare the military stipulations of the Treaty of Versailles null and void "in view of the refusal of other nations to disarm."

The Socialist Deputies will be allowed to attend the Reichstag which is chosen as the scene for the Government statement as attracting more attention than Geneva.

It is understood that Chancellor Hitler will also reply to the speech made in the House of Lords on Thursday by the British Secretary for War, Lord Hailsham, which is regarded as far exceeding any attacks hitherto made, and which has forced the German Government to break her silence.

The juridical result of any breaking-away from the Disarmament Conference by Germany would be that Germany would be bound by the provisions of the Treaty of Versailles, declared Lord Hailsham, Minister of War, during his statement to the House.—Reuter.

German Delegate Recalled.

DR. NADOLNY TO CONSULT WITH HITLER

Geneva, To-day.

Dr. Nadolny, head of the German delegation at Geneva, has been summoned to Berlin on Monday next, for a consultation with Chancellor Hitler.

He will return to Geneva on May 19, and during his absence, Herr Von Rheinbaben will deputise.—Reuter.

EFFORTS TO REMOVE ARMS DEADLOCK.

London, To-day.

The Bureau of the Disarmament Conference yesterday afternoon reviewed the efforts which had been made in private conversations to solve the deadlock caused by the German proposal to remove from the draft Disarmament Convention now before the Conference, the chapters dealing with the standardisation of continental armaments, which are regarded as essential to the plan.

THE FIFTY-FIFTY WARDROBE.

Masculine Modes And Feminine Softness.

STYLE CONTRAST ESSENTIAL.

There's a little bit of the masculine in every good-looking summer wardrobe.

New summer styles make a companionate marriage of the masculine and feminine clothes.

Go in for broad masculine shoulders, masculine woollens, masculine precision of cut in your tailored suit and topcoat. You'll wear them for town, shopping tours, daily office wear and if and when you travel.

Go in for feminine softness and elegance in fox-trimmed dressmakers suits and afternoon frocks for parties, teas, matinees and formal visits.

For summer fashions have their equal shares of each of these two influences. Each is supreme and smart in its own province. They live happily together in the well-chosen wardrobe.

The thing to do is to pick the right kind of things for the right kind of occasions. Don't overdo the charm that is yours if you never appear in gracious, masculine togs. You'll lose some of that indefinable clinging things that spell woman.

However, don't collect a sappy wardrobe, one without character, that runs to clinging garments.

Your mannish things will be made of tweeds—nice, rough English and Scotch tweeds that make you think of the countryside. They will be faultlessly tailored, with stress on lapels, front closings, pockets and the set of sleeves.

They will run to grays, blues, beige and browns and often your blouses under the coats, or your shirts, if you prefer them, will be either crisp white ones or very, very lark silks and plaids.

Your dressy things will be made of softer stuffs, of more smoothly finished wools, soft silks, fine new plaids or plain colours, crinkly crepes, prints, and new weaves of cottons, linens and rayons.

They will have graceful lines, soft touches, be flattering altogether. In colours they may be more out of the ordinary, new shades of green, soft pearl beige and pearl grays, some new ashes of roses pinks and very gay plaids, checks, geometric and formalized prints.

Half the trick is to have the mannish things very, very masculine, with dashing accessories that have the same feeling. The other half is to have feminine ones very soft, very feminine, with laces, hand-work, fine seaming, all fit for a queen.

Don't be a mixer this summer! Don't have your mannish things softened by the wrong blouse and hat and your dressy prints and gay-coloured silks hardened by mannish hats. Take your different types of costumes straight! The skill with which you choose them improves your fundamental good taste.

Beautiful Back Appearance

Neglected Details That Mar.

REAR-VIEW FAULTS.

There are a large number of people who are like the ostrich which is supposed to bury its head in the sand hoping it will not be seen by its enemies.

People of this kind are so tidy and delightful-looking in front. They are clean, carefully powdered, with beautifully kept hair, and are not over lip-sticked. In fact quiet charming. They do not realise that, with a little adjustment, that underslip would not show when they lift their arms or that their dress need not droop dejectedly at the back. They seem only conscious of their appearance at the front. It is so disheartening to meet a charming person and then, when she turns away, to see some little detail that has escaped her notice which takes away all the pleasure her company has given, because you have to acknowledge that she has been careless in her dressing.

From Every Angle.
What is your back like? If you are shingled you are probably all right. You have instinctively examined your head at every charming angle. But if you are not shingled? What about your neck? Is it beautifully white at the back? In the winter and early Spring our furs and high-necked dresses often cause the back of the neck to be slightly yellow.

low. Because the front of our neck is white we take it for granted that the back is likewise. But is it? Do make sure!

Study yourself in the mirror. Get a hand-glass and stand in a good light—sunlight is the best, of course. Examine yourself from head to foot. Are you as attractive at the back as in the front?

If so you may consider yourself a well-dressed, really "soignée" woman. You cannot be anything much nicer, can you?

Look very coldly and critically at yourself before you decide whether you are quite satisfactory.

Study your back view and your side view as if you were examining some one else.

Look at yourself with your hat on and your hat off. Examine the back of your neck, the back of your bare arms and your shoulders.

All Points of View.

Sometimes the pet hair-dressing, which is so attractive at the front, looks ghastly from the side or back views. It may accentuate that rather too-pointed profile, or again it might make your face look longer and thinner than it really is.

What about that fuzzy bit of hair that half covers one ear and entirely shows the other?

There are so many ways in which your hairdressing may spoil your whole appearance that it is well

Jersey Fabric For Country Wear

Jersey is excellent for country wear.

One seen was a suit composed of different weaves of jersey to give variety to its appearance.

A ribbed weave was used for the yoke, upper sleeves and belt of the coat.

The remainder of the two-piece was made of a rough weave.

LINEN-VELVET IS NEW TEXTILE.

A Pleasing Long Cape.

There is a dash and mystery about long capes, associated with romantic long caps in the ultra of the costume drama. Worth makes a romantic long cape in the ultra of ultra-modern textiles, linen velvet, which combines the cool-to-the-touch quality of fax with the soft voluptuousness of velvet as we used to know it.

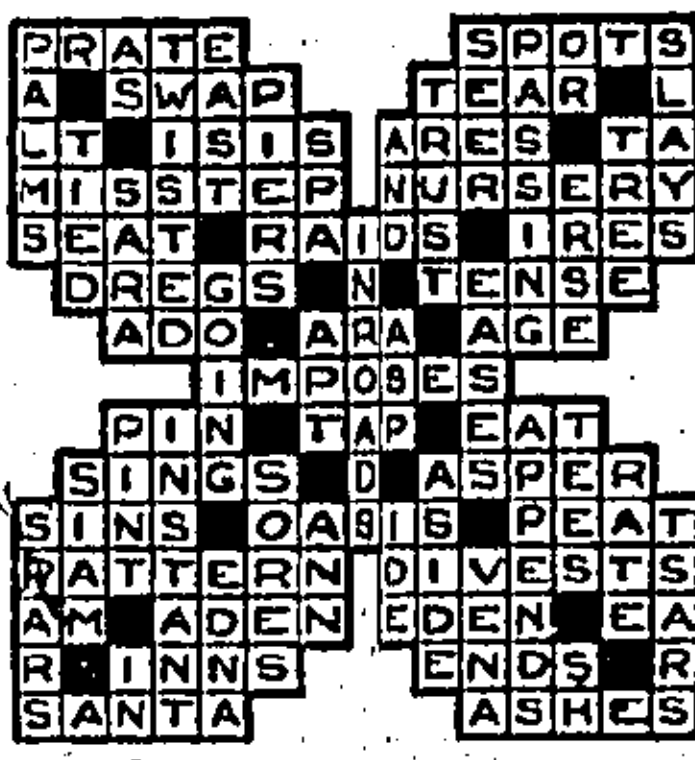

Since long capes are apt to take a lot of draping, Worth has made this model with a bloused drapery in back, so that you only have to clutch it about you to be assured of being graceful.

SUMMER SUITS.

Little light-weight suits composed of two pieces—wrap-over skirt and unlined coat—are likely to be the most favoured fashion during the next few months.

worth while spending a few extra minutes looking at yourself from all angles. When all your little back-view faults are remedied you will hardly recognise yourself, so beautiful will you look.

BRIDGE NOTES

ELIMINATION PLAY

As a means of making an extra trick the coup known as Elimination play is extremely effective. Opportunities for using this device occur fairly frequently and often pass unrecognized.

There are two essential points. The Declarer must be in position to foist the lead on an adversary at a particular stage of play. He can do this with certainty when he knows that the adversary with whom he wishes to place the lead has the master card. Sometimes, however, there is no certainty. It is a matter of conjecture. Even so, the coup should be attempted in all cases where the Declarer has nothing to lose if it does not come off, and everything to gain if it does. The second point is that, before giving the opponent the lead, he must deprive him of any card of escape. He must "strip" the hand or hands by the elimination process so that the player who is put in the lead can do so only to his disadvantage. It may be necessary to leave him with only one suit to lead. Or he may be given the choice of two suits, one of which gives the Declarer a discard in one hand and a ruff in the other, while the second involves leading up to a tenace held by Dummy or Declarer.

Here is a simple example:—

Testimonial.
A Nigerian district officer, finding his steward unsatisfactory, discharged him. Tom asked for a reference, so the district officer gave him the following:
"Tom has been my steward for ten months. He says he wants a good berth. Anyone looking for a good steward should give Tom a wide berth."

"You're new here, aren't you? What's your name?"
"M-M-M-Mabel."
"I'll call you Mabel for short."

Dirty Dix.
DEAR DIRTY DIX,—
I have been going out with a boy for a few months and like him very much. He has been heard to make nasty remarks about my singing and I feel very hurt about it. Should I tell him off or keep on being nice to him.

WORRIED HELEN.
My dear, the answer is easy.—STOP SINGING!

Dear Miss Dix—I have a wife and three children, and I want to make my will. How shall I divide it among them? Leave everything to my wife, or give each one a portion of my estate?

HUSBAND AND FATHER.
If you're the husband of a woman, and the father of three children, and have enough money left to divide in a will, you're a better man than we are Gunga Din! Please don't write us any more letters like this, especially when we have to answer them on a Monday morning.

DIRTY DIX.
Dear Dirty Dix—What makes married women have that insufferable smugness, that silly look of the cat that has swallowed the canary that has so many assume as soon as they get a Mrs. tacked on to their name? I married it, for, after looking at many of their husbands, God knows what they have to crow about. I was once complimented by being told that I did not seem like a married woman at all in that I had none of that obnoxious appearance of self-satisfaction that marks at sight the average married woman.

E. W. N.
My dear, you see the same expression of smug satisfaction on a married woman's face as you do on that of a confirmed bachelor. The woman's is the expression of self-congratulation over achievement: she's got her man, which is what she set out to do the moment she toddled from the cradle. The bachelor's face bears all the glory of a somewhat negative performance: he has been successful in preventing some woman from putting salt on his tail.

particular good double it must be admitted) it was highly probable that A held the high cards in Spades and Clubs and had both the Queen of Spades and King of Clubs—the material cards. At any rate, Z must play on this assumption, and only by so doing could he make his contract.

PAYMENT DEFERRED—QUEEN'S THEATRE

"Payment Deferred," now showing at the Queen's Theatre, is a thriller based on a 'perfect crime'—one that is never detected.

The plot takes an ironical twist, when the murderer, who escapes conviction for his real crime, is punished for one of which he is innocent, being found guilty on circumstantial evidence.

A doctor, a detective, a botanist, and a former English barman, were employed by Metro-Goldwyn Mayer, in order to secure accuracy in details, in this picture.

Charles Laughton who played in both the London, and the New York, stage versions of this story, repeats his celebrated performances in the film.

Maureen O'Sullivan, Dorothy Peterson, Verree Teasdale and Ray Milland form a strong supporting cast, and the picture was directed by Lothar Mendes.

General Lew Wallace's "Ben-Hur—A Tale of the Christ," that was a stage spectacle for twenty-two years, and, as a book, enjoyed a circulation as large as the Bible is seen on the screen—at the Oriental Theatre.

It is grandiose epic that has taken three years for its completion and included as many real-life adventures as an historic odyssey of the Old and New Worlds, Ramon Novarro (in the title role), Betty Bronson, May McAvoy, Francis X. Bushman, Carmel Myers, Claire McDowell, Kathleen Key, Nigel de Bruiler, Mitchell Lewis and Frank Currier have prominent parts.

A double attraction is featured at the Central Theatre, where Charlie Chaplin is appearing in one of his former successes, "Easy Street," now complete with sound and musical effects.

The other attraction is "Little Orphan Annie," starring Milti Green and May Robson. Milti Green is irresistible in her imitation of the four Marx brothers. She also imitates May Robson, who is co-starred with her.

Others in the cast are Buster Phelps and Edgar Kennedy.

"HOT PEPPER"—KING'S THEATRE

After Flanders, Russia, and Nicaragua—Broadway! Our old friends Quirt and Flagg, tough Rabelaisian rivals of "What Price Glory?" and "The Cock-eyed World" have handed in their Marine kit and broken into the Great White Way, one as a boss bootlegger, and the other as a gentleman of leisure, living on his wits with no other armament than a fake police badge, in this fast action comedy at the King's.

Piquant little Miss Lupe Velez breezes stormily into the picture as a South American stowaway on one of Flagg's run-running fleet, to turn cabaret dancer and provide the inevitable subject of the old comrades' amatory tangles.

Introduced into Flagg's mansion inside a liquor sack by that amiable human alcohol-gauge, Olsen (Mr. El Brendel), she disrobes to prevent the harassed Flagg from ejecting her.

Mr. Victor McLaglen is as portentously massive, and Mr. Edmund Lowe as suavely cool as ever.

A SENATOR AMONG THE TRAMPS.

Train-Jumping Official's Investigation.

Melbourne.
Senator R. D. Elliott has just returned to his home here after a week of "jumping trains" and living with tramps. He declares that fellowship and kindness exist among them in a way that is seldom known in more fortunate circles.

The Senator carried with him his bundle of clothes and his rucksack of food.

Once railway detectives put him off a train which he and a group of workless had "jumped." He travelled at one time on top of a truck laden with flour. A gust of wind carried his hat away and a Scandinavian tramp gave him his battered Panama.

He rode on one train that carried more than 100 free travellers and the men divided everything they had to eat. Senator Elliott was investigating the living conditions of the unemployed.

Royal Air Force Comes Of Age

Started In War Without Even A Revolver

ARMY AND NAVY LAUGHED

The Royal Air Force came of age on April 13. In the 21 years of its history, this, the first air fighting service, has covered itself with honours as proud and gallant as any boasted by the other two senior services with centuries of wars and tradition behind them.

The aerodromes of Britain, Palestine, Iraq and India in two decades only have built from a shaky battalion equipped in 1912 with French-made airplanes the most efficient fighting force in the world.

What other force in the story of combat has ever gone into action without a single weapon of any description? The old Royal Flying Corps did in 1914.

What other force of only a couple of squadrons of machines and a personnel of a handful has ever conquered a whole army all by itself? The R. F. C. did in Palestine.

This is the story of how it began.

The Air Battalion was born in 1911. Mr. Asquith in 1912 appointed a committee to go into the question of creating a national air service which would serve both the Navy and the Army, and on April 13th of that year the Royal Flying Corps was formed and a month later the Air Battalion was absorbed into it.

The R.N.A.S.

A prosaic enough beginning; the handful of officers and mechanics brought with them to the new service a few weird-looking biplane and with these and lots of hope the Royal Flying Corps set about making something of itself—the huge amusement of the Navy and Army.

To-day there is one officer serving who was a member of the original company. He is Air-marshal Sir Robert Brooke-Popham, air officer commanding-in-chief the air defence of Great Britain, and he is the only one left.

Just before the war the Royal Naval Air Service was formed without any authority except that of the Admiralty itself, so the legend goes.

When war broke out, however, the Royal Flying Corps had 179 machines; the R.N.A.S. had 93 and the total personnel was 1900 officers and men.

The fastest fighting machine in the world then was the Sopwith, which attained the speed of 70 m.p.h. (about). The Schneider Trophy was won at 86.8 m.p.h. and the R. F. C. had five squadrons including one reserve.

On August 12, 1914, No. 2 Squadron left Montrose for Farnborough and was joined next day by Squadrons Nos. 3 and 4, and later No. 5, which flew to Dover after what the official reports call "some accidents." Two or three of them made forced landings and one or two more tipped up on their noses.

In the command of Brigadier-general Sir David Anderson they accompanied the Expeditionary

COMMUNIST MONEY BAN IN CHILE.

New Issue Of Stamps And Coins.

Santiago, Chile.
Communist money has been abolished in Chile, and all coins which include a sickle and hammer in their design are to be withdrawn.

New coins will be designed with a wreath of the national flower instead of laurel leaves. On the reverse there will be an engraving of a volcano.

Chile is also making new issues of air mail stamps which will include the status of Capoulet with an aeroplane in flight, a volcano lighting on a mountain, and a machine in flight over a country with trees blown down.

Force across the Channel and so became the first air force in the world to travel overseas and to go into action.

On August 19 the first aerial reconnaissance in history was made by two machines which set off at 9.30 in the morning without observers. The idea of sending out two machines was that if one had to make a forced landing, the other could return with the news—and also the results of the reconnaissance. Unfortunately both machines lost themselves, but they came home safely and were able to give valuable information about the movement of German troops.

Unarmed Planes.

Every day machines went out without a revolver, a rifle, a machine-gun, or a single bomb. It had never occurred to anyone that the war might ever be taken into the air and it was not until a machine came back with an observer wounded by rifle fire from infantry that the Royal Flying Corps retaliated by carrying revolvers and then rifles.

The first aerial battle ever fought took place on September 22, when a German "Albatross" attacked a British reconnaissance machine, the pilot of which was wounded in the leg from a revolver bullet.

Then, on April 1, 1918, the Royal Flying Corps and the Royal Naval Air Service ceased to exist as separate entities and became merged in a new body called the Royal Air Force.

The new service did not have long to wait for honour, for on September 22 in the same year it gained for itself undying fame for the greatest single combat in warfare.

On the day the Seventh Turkish Army was in full retreat across the Jordan at Jisr and Ed Damiye. Plans were laid for its complete confusion and to the R.A.F. fell the honour of carrying it out.

The attack was arranged so that two airplanes should arrive over the objective every three minutes with additional formations of bombers every half hour afterwards from 8 a.m. till noon.

Nothing like it had ever been seen in war before and not even the R.A.F. itself imagined that such amazing success would attend its operations.

The sides of the road were bordered by steep ravines and when the airplanes began to arrive the Turkish Army was caught like a rat in a trap. The head of the column was reduced to complete chaos; drivers jumped from their motor lorries in panic leaving them to run amok; maddened horses trampled the soldiery underfoot; guns, teams, limbers became locked together inextricably—but there was never a respite from the hail of bullets from the swooping formations, or the rain of explosives from the bombers as they dived steeply down, zooming and rolling in the air clear of the force of successive detonations.

2200 War Machines.

By the time the British troops arrived, the Seventh Turkish Army had ceased to exist.

When the war ended the original little force with a few ramshackle French monoplane had grown to a tremendous fighting machine which at home had completely conquered the Zeppelin and Gotha raiders and won supremacy in the air above the trenches.

It possessed then 2,200 machines, 40,000 engines and an establishment of just under 500,000 men.

To-day, although it is not the largest air power, it is recognised as being the most efficient in the world. The R.A.F. is equipped with the fastest single-seat fighters in the world, capable of speeds of 220 m.p.h. and day bombers capable of carrying their tons of projectiles over long distances at nearly 190 m.p.h.

Its present establishment, including India, is 2,000 officers (of whom 2,200 are pilots) and 22,000 men. First line aircraft number 884 and altogether for training, reserve, and auxiliary purposes there are 1,300 machines.

FAMOUS RACONTEUR PASSES.

M. J. W. Bienstock Dies In Paris.

Paris.
The world's greatest raconteur has died in Paris. He was J. W. Bienstock, writer and journalist, a Russian by birth but a citizen of Paris for the past 40 years.

His fund of stories was inexhaustible, and far from being touched with Russian melancholy they had a distinct Gallic humour of their own. When anyone else began to tell him a story he immediately laughed. "But I haven't got to the point yet," said the astonished story teller. "Oh, I'm not laughing at your tale," was the quick rejoinder, "I'm laughing at the one that I'm going to tell you when you have finished."

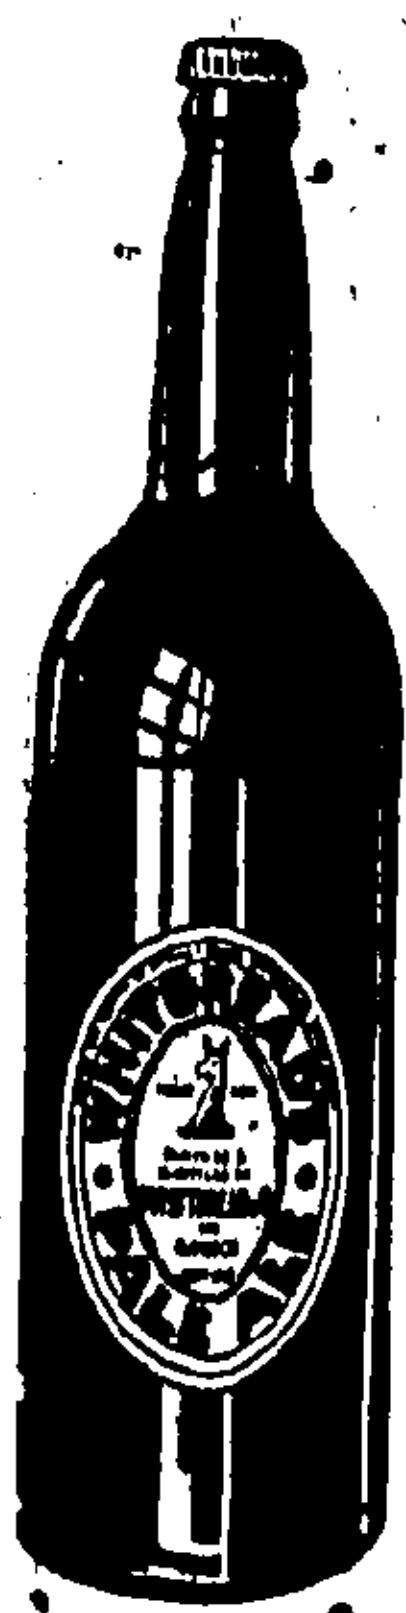

Bienstock, with his Mephistophelian beard, was immensely popular in Paris. He was also an indomitable worker. He translated the whole of Tolstoi (27 volumes) into French; he adapted Dostoevski for the French stage; he wrote a study of the revolutionary movement in Russia, and in collaboration with Curnonsky published a number of amusing collections of stories which provide conversationalists with a mine of merriment on which to draw. — Reuter.

World Markets.

The United States Senate finally passed the Farm Relief Bill on Wednesday, but in the Congress debates little attention has been given to international aspects of the problem of putting American agriculture on a profitable basis. The purpose of the measure adopted by the House is to restore "parity" between prices of farm commodities and those of non-agricultural products. For this purpose the price ratio existing in the period from 1909 to 1914 is taken as the norm. But particularly during the later years of this pre-war period foreign markets were an important influence in maintaining the "parity" which the House now seeks to re-establish. In 1912, for example, American exports of wheat amounted to 145,000,000 bushels, or about 20 per cent. of the domestic crop. Last year America's sales of wheat abroad were only 82,000,000 bushels, or less than 12 per cent. of her production. In the difference between these figures lies one important cause of the debacle in farm prices. Some of the influences which have curtailed foreign markets for American farm products were in evidence before the depression. Competitive production of cotton, tobacco and other staples was increasing in certain countries. Per capita consumption of wheat had been decreasing in Western Europe for some years before 1929. But these influences did not vary greatly in effect from year to year. Of much more immediate importance were developments initiated by the depression. Purchasing power was reduced in foreign countries which had hitherto been large purchasers of American cotton and foodstuffs. At the same time many of these countries found themselves deprived of the foreign loans on which they had depended for adjustment of their international balances. In order to reduce the consequent demand upon their currencies, they adopted one or both of two expedients. The first was to increase their tariffs, devise "quota" systems and by other means restrict the flow of imports. The second was to subsidize domestic industries, particularly agriculture, in order to enable their own producers to sell at low prices in foreign markets and thereby obtain on international balance funds needed for the payment of obligations owed abroad. Both processes were deflationary, and both have had a profound effect on the fortunes of the American farmer since 1929. Because agricultural prices are established in world markets and because American farmers are dependent on foreign trade to absorb from one-fifth to one-half of the wheat, cotton, tobacco and land they produced in the "parity" period of 1909-14, questions of tariffs, currencies and inter-governmental debts are fundamental factors in the rehabilitation of agriculture.

The Unknown Earth.

Exploration is still thought of as a phase of adventure rather than of science. Yet it must rank in importance with the work that the physicists and chemists are doing in tearing bits of matter apart in order to discover what the earth and the stars are made of. It is science at its empirical best. We live on a planet, small as celestial bodies go, but huge to us—so huge that only a few centuries ago we were sure of its globular shape. Like ants we are still busily crawling over it, poking into strange nooks and crannies that turn out to be fjords, wriggling through jungles and swamps, skirting deserts and fastness that we fear to enter. The passing of Prince Luigi Amadeo of Savoy, better known as the Duke of the Abruzzi, reminds us how much crawling remains still to be done. In his lifetime he held two records—one for a "farthest north" that Peary was destined to beat and the other for having climbed to the unprecedented height of 22,650 feet in an unsuccessful attempt to scale Mount Godwin-Austen or K-2 in the Kashmir Himalayas. Scientifically more important was his conquest of the Ruwenzori range—Ptolemy's legendary Mountains of the Moon, where the Nile was supposed to have its source. He must be regarded not only as the lineal descendant of kings but as the spiritual descendant of that long line of bold, curious and restless men who pushed on into the unknown and thus stilled some nameless, inner, racial urge to carry on the unlikeliest exploration of the terrestrial surface. Was he the last of the great rovers, half athlete and half scientist? Although the airplane, and the Zeppelin have added more to our topographic knowledge in a week than we could hope to gather in a century of tedious crawling, we cannot yet expunge the words terra incognita from the geographical lexicon. Half the Arctic and the Antarctic are still unexplored. In Alaska are mountain-blocks almost as mythical as was the Ruwenzori range until the Duke of the Abruzzi climbed it—a region of incredible tales spun by Indians and Eskimos. The heart of the Sahara, lush with its rumored cases of antiquity and the mountains of its Berber songs, in Northern Arabia thirty warring and blinding ghettos have proved perfect defenses against the hardest tribesmen, who have but since 1929. Because agricultural

At Battersea, the same versatile architect has helped to design a Home-of-the-Machine, the new Battersea Power Station. Its turbine-house has the vastness and nobility of a cathedral. Eight million bricks have been used, and its two fluted chimneys are higher than the dome of St. Paul's.

Degree for M. Herriot.

It is understood that M. Herriot will visit Britain in June to receive the honorary degree of D.C.L. from Glasgow University. M. Herriot will be accompanied by Professor Einstein, to whom Glasgow has offered a similar distinction.

Since his return from America Einstein has been staying with friends in Brussels. He is now looking for a quiet cottage on the Belgian coast, where he proposes to live until a change of regime in Germany makes it possible for him to return to his old flat in Berlin.

Einstein in A Palace?

King Alfonso's former palace in Madrid, is to be utilised by the Spanish Government for a variety of official purposes.

If Einstein, who has accepted an offer of Spanish citizenship and hospitality, is nominated to a Chair at the University of Madrid, he may find himself allocated residential quarters in the palace, for a large portion of the building and its many annexes will be used to accommodate students and professors of the University.

One wing of the palace will be reserved for the use of the President of the Republic, Senor Alcalá Zamora. Another wing, it is expected, will serve as a museum for art treasures for which no room can be found in the Prado.

TERRORISED M.P.'S.
OF BRITAIN
THE BOGEY OF NATIONAL GOVERNMENT
CLOAK FOR ALL PARTIES

(By A. A. B.)

London.
The word National is in everybody's mouth: we hear little or nothing of the, to my mind, preferable word Rational.

My objection to the name National is that it is that most dangerous thing in controversy, a question-begging adjective.

No party can claim a monopoly of Nationalism any more than of patriotism. Every Briton would deny indignantly that his policy was anti-National. Mr. Lansbury would repudiate loudly the charge that the Socialist Party was not a National Party. Indeed, their claim to take the places of the present Government is that the Socialist Party is the true representative of the nation.

Nobody yet has the courage to hoist the standard of the Rational Party, a party, that is, broad-bottomed in sobriety, argued truth, plain and intelligible principles, no class war, in short, in reason, not on shouting at public meetings and the bribery of the electorate.

The first things that a Rational Government would do are these:

It would prohibit the use of the card vote by the trade unions. Voting by proxy was a privilege long ago taken away from the peers. It has been reserved for this democratic age to restore this privilege to the trade unions, but in a much more dangerous form.

Dangerous Voting.

A trade union secretary will appear at an important meeting of the T.U.C. with a card vote of, say, 2,000,000 from the coal miners, or 1,500,000 from the wool-combers or the railwaymen. In this way the trade union officials will proclaim a strike carried by a majority of millions, though not one in ten of the card voters know what they are voting for. "We pay our officials to do our thinking for us," the men will say. This is voting by proxy in a most dangerous form, and ought to be abolished.

The second thing our Rational Government would do would be the revival of the old law which regarded the publication of the division lists as a breach of parliamentary privilege. The ballot, or secret voting, was enacted some sixty years ago to protect the voters from undue influence on the part of their employers. To-day it is the elected who require protection from their employers, the electors. In no other way will you get the independent and sincere opinions of the M.P.s.

What remarkable results you would get by secret voting in the House of Commons! On the London Passenger Transport Bill, for instance! A general election would lose its terrors.

Absurd! A counsel of perfection! Quite impracticable! people would say. Everything is thought, impracticable until it is done. In no other way can you make the world safe for democracy. Let the parties lay their programmes before the people at a general election, and let candidates be elected thereon. How they carry out their duties must be left to the honour and the intelligence of honourable members.

General Strike "Challenge"

A pamphlet is before me by Sir Warden Chilcott, who came into Parliament on the wave of the Coalition in 1918, and went out of it in 1929; generally because, as he tells us, he was sick of party government, particularly because he disapproved of the American war debt being funded in terms of gold, and because he thought that "the challenge hung at us by the trade unions at the time of the strike should there and then be taken up and fought to a definite conclusion!" Two excellent reasons fortified by time.

I am therefore a little puzzled by the enthusiastic adoption of the National Government, which Sir Warden Chilcott, in his pamphlet, calls upon us all to share with him. How he handles and fondles the pamphlet! How he rocks it and caresses it! "To heaven's name, why?" Mr. Baldwin, the founder of the American War Debt, who gave the trade unions £20,000,000, and called off his men when the battle was lost.

won, is still there, though under the patronage of the Socialist, who was anathema maranatha to Sir Warden Chilcott in 1918. Except for the addition of Messrs. Simon and Runciman, who broke up Mr. Lloyd George, the National Government seems to me like all other Coalitions.

Stay, there is a difference. Mr. Baldwin has told Sir Robert Horne that he is prepared "to sacrifice brains to party fidelity." All party leaders think this: but Mr. Baldwin is the first statesman who is innocent enough to proclaim it. Perhaps the sacrifice is not so great as it sounds. Still, might not Mr. Baldwin risk the experiment of releasing a tiny dose of Conservative brains—cautiously, of course; safety first, you know—even though it exposed him to the danger of hearing a few blunt truths from Mr. Boothby, or one or two biting sarcasms from Mr. Brendan Bracken?

A Glasgow audience the other day acclaimed Mr. Baldwin as "a jolly good fellow." What meaning the worthy Glaswegians attach to those two adjectives I do not know. But he certainly is a very costly fellow, for he has tied round our necks for 60 years a necklace 2,000 millions payable, in biennial instalments, in dollars. One cannot help thinking he would have been a jollier and a better fellow if he had learnt the rule of compound interest, for if we carry out the bargain, of which he seems quite proud, we shall have paid twice the amount of the original debt.

And then, quite in the jolly good fellow style, he made a present of the vote to 5,000,000 girls under 30 without so much as consulting the existing electorate, or even the midnettes themselves.

Sir Warden Chilcott, when he leaves the temple of worship for the market place, makes several very pregnant and original observations. Instead of splitting up the Austro-Hungarian Empire into uneconomic fragments, on the childish doctrine of self-determination, the Versailles Treaty should have split up the North German Confederation, known as the German Empire. The Bavarians, Hanoverians and Wurtembergers would have been delighted to escape from the domination of Prussia, and Germany would have been far more effectually disarmed then by any Reparations or Conference rules. It may be too late to do it now, but the proposal is original and sound.

Depression Blamed For Increase.

Melbourne, Victoria.

An increase in the number of tuberculosis cases among young women is reported by the clinical officer at the State Tuberculosis Bureau. This is attributed to the economic conditions of the depression.

"So many young women who work in factories," he says, "go off in the morning with a very light breakfast. They return at night, have an inadequate dinner, and go out, tired, to pictures or dances." On the whole, however, there has been a decrease in the number of tuberculosis cases notified and in the number of deaths from tuberculosis. — Reuter.

CHRISTIAN COUNCIL MEETING.

Bishop Hall Conducts Sunday Service.

MANY DISCUSSIONS AT SUNKIANG.

On Saturday afternoon, May 6, two groups of the delegates to the Biennial Meeting of the National Christian Council visited the points of interest in and around Sungkiang, Kiangsu, where the meeting is being held. One group went to visit an experimental farm conducted by a Chinese Christian family, while another group visited a Catholic institution. On Saturday evening, devotional films were shown.

On Sunday morning, May 7, the Rt. Rev. R. O. Hall, Bishop of Victoria, conducted the regular church service. Every other morning of the Conference, morning worship is conducted by different delegates for half an hour in the nearby church. Beginning with Sunday evening, also, the delegates to the meeting divided into group fellowships to be continued throughout the rest of this meeting of the Council. These fellowships are quite informal and are conducted in both English and Chinese.

On Sunday afternoon, at 4.00 p.m., the Rt. Rev. L. H. Roots gave, in English, an interpretation of the Oxford Groups' movement, which was translated by Dr. Wu Yi-fang, President of Ginling Woman's College, Nanking. Bishop Roots endeavoured to outline the major principles of this Groups' Movement and gave some idea of the most recent and informative literature thereon. He outlined the principles of this Groups' Movement as divine guidance, fearless dealing with sin, the sharing of the experience of victory and of confession, expressional activity, stewardship, teamwork, and loyalty to those who live out the teachings of Christ.

Bishop Roots concluded his address by asking what ought to be done about the challenge of this movement. He urged that in order that Christians might be at their best, they should seek personal renewal, cultivate deeper fellowship with their colleagues, share their experience more with others, study carefully with a view to personal growth, and check up their Christian life by frequent reference to Christ Himself.

Rev. Rees' Address. On Monday afternoon, May 8, at 4.00 p.m., Mr. Z. H. Tang, of Shanghai, gave fervent witness to his own experience in connection with the Oxford Groups' Movement.

The first part of Monday morning, May 8, was taken up by reports. The report on evangelism was given by Dr. H. H. Tsui and Rev. Ronald Rees, both secretaries of the National Christian Council. Both developed, among other things, the important point that the theme and field of evangelism includes children as well as adults and has to do with all types of work as well as all ages of people. Mr. Rees urged evangelistic workers and educationalists to think and work together in terms of educational evangelism. "What," he asked, "is the content of regeneration? To what are we converting people?" These are, he urged, questions to be studied and answered.

Mr. Rees further urged that evangelism has a three-fold aim. First, the conversion of the individual to God; second, that of the conversion of all the relationships of men to one another; and, third, the conversion of the political, social and economic system under which we live.

Dr. C. S. Miao then gave, in both English and Chinese, a report on religious education. He dealt in particular with the work of National Christian Educational Committee, which is only a year old, having been established as a result of the visit of Dr. Corley to China. He urged that the work done before and after evangelistic meetings is highly important. He pointed out that something had been done to develop textbooks in character building. These textbooks had all been worked out on the field as the result of experimentation. Like Mr. Rees, Dr. Miao urged the development and use of voluntary leaders. Dr. Miao also

BRIDE MARRIED TO WRONG MAN.

Mistake Discovered At Ceremony.

Tokio. In the midst of her wedding ceremony, a bride who was being married at the village of Oh, suddenly burst into tears. Sobs came from her bowed head, which was bound in a "wataboshi" or cotton head-cover.

When the bridegroom sought to console her, she bared her face and revealed herself as a total stranger. She was crying, she explained, because she was being married to the wrong man.

The strange accident occurred at the Naba railway station when the bride, got into the wrong motor car. She had arrived at Naba by train, expecting to be met and taken to her own wedding by motor car. The right bride had been on the same train but she had been left at the station.

Everyone then went back to the station and the right bridal parties were sorted out. — Reuter.

LOCUST MENACE IN ALGERIA.

Pigs And Poultry War On Pest.

Algiers. Pigs, poultry and dogs are waging a relentless and successful war against the invading swarms of locusts near Wagram, Algeria, which threaten to devour every scrap of leaf and vegetable in the countryside.

Four hundred pigs are estimated to eat nearly two tons of locusts every day.

Meanwhile the whole population of the district has been mustered to fight the menace, and organised bands of natives have killed, collected and buried 15 tons of locusts. — Reuter.

urged that, in addition, trained leadership is needed.

Church And Home.

The report of the Committee on Christianizing the Home was presented by Miss Li Guan-fang, of the Christian Literature Society, and Mrs. Fisher. Mrs. Fisher pointed out that in attempting to Christianize the home, the church is at once dealing with all kinds of people and all types of problems. Among other things, the Committee and laid emphasis on the three rights of the child: 1, That to a healthy childhood; 2, That to a happy childhood; and, 3, That to spiritual and moral training. Mrs. Fisher also pointed out that Christianizing the home involves a great variety of projects and is closely tied up with every aspect of the Five Year Movement.

Part of the morning and of the afternoon of Monday was spent by the delegates in group discussions. It is interesting to note that the speeches made to this Biennial Meeting of the National Christian Council are short that a large part of the time has, up to date, been spent in discussion groups.

Development in the solution of the language problem as compared with its treatment in past meetings of the National Christian Council is evident in this Biennial Meeting. In the early days of the National Christian Council, it was the custom for every speech and item of business to be translated into English and vice versa. The practice of this Biennial Meeting is, however, quite varied. Some meetings and discussions are carried on entirely in Chinese, others entirely in English, while some are bilingual. Speeches are sometimes translated and sometimes a particular topic is presented first by a speech in Chinese and then by one in English, neither being a direct translation of the other.

Chinese speakers very often translate their own speeches into English. While, therefore, there is no formal attempt to have every item of the Council's proceedings translated, yet in this way the speeches and meetings are handled. It is still recognized that few missionaries can assimilate everything they hear through the varied provincial types of Mandarin used and that some of the Chinese cannot understand a speech made in English.

TOC H MOVEMENT.

Padre Ford Due In Colony To-morrow.

The Toc H Padre "Bobs" Ford, accompanied by Mr. Harry Chapell, who are touring the Far East in an endeavour to extend the sphere of influence of the Society, are due to arrive in Hong Kong, on their return journey, by the s.s. Taiyuan, to-morrow. They will stay in the Colony only a few days.

A farewell dinner to the two travellers will be given at the Volunteer Headquarters, at 8 p.m., on Monday. The dinner will be followed at 9.15 p.m. by a meeting, which will be open to all those who will be unable to attend the dinner.

TERRORISED M.P.'S. OF BRITAIN

Fruitful Suggestions.

Other fruitful and penetrative suggestions contained in these compact pages are an income tax on industrial capital reduced to 2s. in the £, the unfortunate rentier to be left as he is, for the present, and the deficiency to be made up and the price of primary commodities to be raised by a mild and controlled inflation, that is, an increase in paper money.

Reputation, as Sir Warden observes, of the reckless indebtedness incurred by "Mont" and Stanley and other jolly good fellows is bound to come, and controlled inflation is the least hurtful form of it.

Another good idea is the payment of the dole in kind, partially, at least. "Food, clothes, and baccy might be paid in kind, as parish relief used to be, and the tyranny of the trade unions in forbidding part-time should be stopped.

As a final exhortation, Sir Warden Chilcote adjures us, with all the emphasis of the blackest of ink, to "and by the National Government, for 'should it fall, this country as a first class Power must fall with it."

"Never believe it," Sir Warden does not believe it. To assert that England's greatness depends on Monty, Ramsay MacDonald and Baldwin, neither of whom has any clear ideas or fixed principles, is an insult. When the Government has given the way of all conditions, the spirit and intelligence of the British people will still be there.

To-Day's Short Story.

ON THE ROAD

By H. E. Bates.

THE wood was flooded with April sunlight, but shallow pools of rain lay wherever there were hollows in the black earth under the oak trees. Black rings of ashes were dotted about the ground where tramps had made their fires and rested, and primroses were blooming everywhere at the feet of young hazel trees. The wind that blew the hazels with a soft sound one against another was sweet and warm and laden with the scent of the primroses. It was like the breath of a new life.

A man came into the wood from the road and strode a hundred paces into it at random among the hazel trees. He was tall and black-haired and powerfully broad at the shoulders; he carried himself superbly, with a slight swagger of his hips, holding his head high up, and sometimes throwing it slightly backward, with unconscious motions of arrogance and pride. He looked less like a tramp than a fighter, but less like a fighter than some proud, sardonic Indian. His face was muscular and powerful, the skin was burnt tough and dry by the sun, and there was a glimpse of a tattoo mark of a purple and crimson flower on his chest. He was dressed in light-brown trousers, a black jacket slung over his shoulder, a soft grey hat and a blue shirt faded and washed to the colour of the sky. He stooped and picked off a primrose with a finger-nail and put the flower in his mouth. He was looking for a place to rest.

He took another twenty paces into the wood and saw the white smoke of a fire among the trees. He stopped and gazed at the smoke for one moment and then walked on. In another moment he came upon a woman and man sitting by the fire on a space of earth between a shallow-bush and an oak tree. The man was asleep, with his head against the oak tree, and the woman was boiling a can of water on a heap of smoking wood. He saw a black bundle on the earth and an old perambulator pushed back against the shallow.

He stood perfectly still and gazed at the woman without a flicker of his dark eyes. She was dressed in a short black skirt and an old stained orange-coloured jersey stretched as tight as skin over her big breasts and shoulders. Her hair was very thick and blonde, and there was something about her that recalled a lioness; the tawny eyes sleepy and rich with changing lights, the lips ripe and heavy, the large, strong face superb, with its passionate languor. She had a newspaper open on her knees, but she put it down on the earth as he looked at her. Her hands were strong and handsome, and the skin was a beautiful golden colour, smooth and with tiny blonde hairs that gleamed in the sunshine.

MONDAY'S STORY.

Monday's story will be "The Magnolia Street Wanderer," by Louis Golding.

"Sit down," she said. She waved her hand. There were no rings on her fingers. Her voice was low, and careless and husky.

He looked at the man lying with his head against the oak tree. She half-smiled.

"He's asleep," she said. "He's all right. You won't wake him."

He sat down on the black earth. He sat so that he could see both the man and the woman at one glance. In an instant he saw astounding differences between them. The man was nagged and white, and the bones of his cheeks stood out clear and sharp as knuckles under his dark eyes.

His face was dirty and dissolute and strengthless, and he lay like a man who had received a stunning blow, his closed eyes dark as two deep bruises under his narrow brows. He looked as if he would never wake again, and the woman looked at him with one hasty glance of indifference, as if not caring whether he woke or not.

The water in the can began to bubble, and the woman slipped a stick under the handle and took the can from the fire. The man leaned across without hesitation and quickly shook something brown from a packet into the water.

"You're very smart," she flashed, looking up. "What was that?"

He leaned over and stirred the water with the stick, which he took from her own hands. "Coffee."

Arresting.

He spoke the word with the primrose in his mouth, and then leaned back and took the flower from his mouth and spat away an inch of bitten stalk and put it back again. There was something about the paleness of the primrose against his dark face that made him doubly arresting.

They stared at each other in silence, their eyes languid and bold and unflickering.

"Where are you making for?" he asked suddenly.

"Liverpool," she said.

He looked at the perambulator. Then he glanced at her shoes. He noticed for the first time her blistered feet through the soles. He looked at her sharply.

"You're a hell of a way from Liverpool. A hell of a way," he said.

She did not answer. The smell of the coffee was strong in the wood, and there was no sound except the whistling of a blackbird and the bees booming softly in the yellow dusty yellow blooms. She reached over to the bundle and brought out two blue enamel cups and poured out the coffee and handed a cup to him.

"No sugar," she said in a languid voice.

He fumbled at his pocket and brought out a packet of yellow sugar and set it on the earth between them and nodded towards the steaming cups.

Shanghai Cricketers Colony Will See Next November

Shanghai, May 7. Glorious weather yesterday greeted the return of "King Cricket" to the playing fields of the Race Course and after a most interesting game, L. F. Stokes' eleven defeated the side captained by A. J. Barson by a solitary run, the winners scoring 189 to their opponent's 188.	Cricketer 2 for 36, while Booth, James and Stokes each took a wicket.
The Cricket Club pavilion was crowded with enthusiasts of both sexes and in view of the closeness of play towards the conclusion of the match, those present had their interest held right up to the fall of the last wicket.	Scores:— A. J. Barson's XI W. Marshall, c & b Elliott 10 P. V. Simpson, c Gardner, b Elliott 5 C. E. M. Thompson, retired 51 A. J. Barson, c Simpson, b Elliott 4 H. H. Morris, b Elliott 3 E. H. The pitch was in excellent condition and runs came quickly on both sides, numerous boundaries being scored during the day's play.	Total 189
L. F. Stokes put up the best batting result of the day, retiring with a well-made 84 to his credit. His forceful hitting did much to enliven the match. He hit several sixes and numerous fours. G. B. More scored quickly after a slow start and knocked out 87 for the winning side while R. Booth was third highest scorer with 25 to his credit.	Bowling Analysis O. M. R. W. Elliott, R. Among the bowlers, R. S. Elliott came off with the best average, taking four wickets for 36 runs. His bowling was very erratic and though he was fortunate in securing wickets, he was not at all steady. E. H. Anstie on the opposing team performed the "hat-trick" with his slow deliveries and proceeded to take another wicket so that he returned the average of 4 for 52. SARATOGA WIN SHANGHAI DERBY EVENT

China II Beaten In Close Finish.
MARSHALL'S "HAT TRICK"

Shanghai, May 9.
RACING people must have felt somewhat gloomy yesterday morning when they awoke to look upon leaden skies and to feel the cut of a cold wind. However, it would be unthinkable to spoil such a meeting as Shanghai is having, and even the weather relented and it was again beautifully fine, though jockeys and ponies who do not keep their mouths shut must have been somewhat inconvenienced by the strong wind that blew throughout the day.

The main reason for living yesterday was the Shanghai Derby, and it was something for which it was well worth keeping alive. It is more years ago than the present generation can remember since a really good pony came the way of Mr. "Durgor" as the racebooks have it; "Mazook" as the vast army of his personal friends insist; or Mr. Kadoorie as men of big business know him. Perhaps the date goes as far back as the days of the famous China, and so it was with genuine pleasure that racing men noted the advent of China II, a really first-class pony. Mr. Kadoorie is of the old school who regard the Derby as the great race to win, and it did seem that he could do it, especially when he had the assistance of Jimmy Pote-Hunt, who must rank equally with "Buffy" Maitland as the most brilliant of the younger jockeys of to-day. The veteran failed in his hope, but he, his jockey, and his pony failed with all honours.

Perhaps equally with Mr. Kadoorie, of all the owners represented, the club would have liked to see Mr. Allan win. He takes the greatest delight in winning even small races, he has spent a great deal of money on racing, and he has had so many ponies that he has run out of all the States in the American Union, and now is well on the way to exhausting city names as well. He had never won a Derby, and strange as it may seem, neither had his jockey, J. K. Brand.

With little Saratoga, they won a really good one, and, as Saratoga evidently, by the time he passed the post, had given the last ounce that was in him, it says much for the pluck of the pony and the skill of the jockey that they were successful, for China II was going great guns at the finish. So was little Tich, who was only just out of a place. And what a roar there would have been had he come in to make a double with old Vecheerock, for the green-and-black is as popular with the crowd as all colours that go out on the backs of genuine triers!

Considering the course, it may not be accepted that the Derby was run in very fast time, but it was a very good and a very interesting race, with Phantom Prince the only one who never seemed to have a chance, and there is good reason to anticipate that every one of the runners later will do well in the best company.

EASIER GOLF

H. STUART HOBSON

GOLF AS I SEE IT.

Swing High—Swing Low!

CORRECTING FOOTWORK.

Like many other golfers, I have been away for a golfing holiday, and in common with many of my fellow players, I have had to spend long minutes on the first tee, waiting for earlier couples to play away.

However, perhaps these minutes were not altogether wasted, as they gave me the opportunity of studying new styles. And as I stood waiting, an old tag flashed through my mind.

That you make up on the swings what you lose on the roundabouts.

If one pauses to think, one can find a great likeness between the up and down action of the swing boat, as typifying the correct golf swing, and the circular flat action of the roundabout, illustrating how not to swing a golf club.

If the golf swing is dissected, it will be found to consist of footwork, handwork, bodywork and headwork. Under the last heading I do not only include the use of the eyes in the head to watch the ball, but also the use of the brain to understand thoroughly the job in hand.

To deal further with the question of mentality before turning to the physical side of golf, I am absolutely certain that many shots are missed at the game because the player has not concentrated 100% on the matter in hand.

Before playing the shot, be convinced that you are using the right club, so that you can focus your whole attention on the particular job in hand, which is the production of a good shot.

Concentration may be natural, or it may be acquired, but without it no man or woman will ever be a good golfer.

Many swings take a wrong shape in their course through incorrect footwork.

There is a tendency among golfers to get right up on to the toe of the left foot when taking the club back, so that, when they are at the top of the swing, the smallest push in the back will put them completely off balance. They are almost wavering or tottering in their balance, so that control of the swing and body balance are bound to go by the board.

While the left foot should leave the ground to permit of a free back swing the closer to the ground the foot can be kept the safer for the player. Moreover, the less the foot is raised the more certain it is to be returned flat to the ground in the down swing, thus ensuring a braced left side to hit against.

The really correct action is for the outside of the sole of the left foot to be clear of the ground while the inside of the sole and heel remain in contact with the ground.

With regard to handwork, I am absolutely sure that the making or marring of a good swing lies in the correct use of the hands. I may be accused of riding a pet hobby horse when I again accentuate the necessity of making the left hand the master hand, and of subjugating the right hand. But for some time past I have been playing a number of my shots with a quick hook or a smoother, and I find the reason is that I have been pulling the club away with my right hand, which moved my right elbow away from my side, and resulted in a horrible e flat swing, just like our roundabout, with the right hand coming in so much that the club face was shut down at the moment of impact. I have played myself back into reasonable form by accentuating the lead away from the ball with a turn inward of the left hip, and a certainty that the left hand is taking the club back. This gives a higher and a truer swing, the left arm sweeping up and down almost touching the body all the way, but without keeping the left arm straight, as some critics will have it.

The left arm is firm, but it cannot be straight without being stiff, which is the last thing wanted in a golf swing.

The only time the left arm is really straight is at the moment of impact, and that is quite as essential as the avoidance of it elsewhere. You will find that, if the right hand is taking control, the right elbow will wander away from the body, thus throwing swing out of the true line.

With regard to bodywork, many players do not pivot at the hips as they so fondly imagine! They only sway the hips.

The pivotal movement of the hips is a definite turn inward towards the ball by the left hip, and is not a lateral sway that moves the hip to the side without allowing it to turn in. Keep your weight well balanced, and at the top of the swing you will find yourself focusing the ball over the left shoulder, chiefly with the left eye, because, despite the old adage of keeping your head still, the head does actually move if the swing is correct. TO-DAY'S SOCCER

SOUTH CHINA SHOULD WIN CHAMPIONSHIP

Depleted Navy Team
On View.

CLUB AND ATHLETIC TO WIN.

TO-DAY will prove a sad day for the Artillery who will in all probability lose the leadership of the First Division to South China, after having held it for the past four months.

South China play the Navy to-day and should again register a win, after beating the Police on Thursday.

What used to know when the old man's joints were more supple, but his last win in Shanghai was about this time last year, and the one before that about the same time in the year before. Thus, when Nobby Clark was seen to be bringing Subsidiy along at a rare pace and Theta was hanging on, there was some surprise. There was more when, just at the right moment, Billy Hill came slamming along with something of his ancient power and claimed first by a length.

There was still more surprise when Frank Vids—who also would be a greybeard if he had a beard—led in the winner. He had to be asked why and he explained: "Elliott pays for him, Alf trains him, and I am honorary adviser."

Mr. P. H. McKay was heard to remark that he wished there had been some hon. advising about Artapint who beards in the same stable, and whose medical consultant had to be called in yesterday.

"Pammy" Marshall followed with two wins running, making three for the day, and a very clever piece of work too. It should be noted that he is a very experienced player, and he is a very experienced player.

Should the Navy by any chance force a draw, South China will still be in the running for championship honours as they will still have a game in hand.

The Navy, however, are a very depleted team, having only the Tamar, the Destroyers, Submarines and the Royal Naval Hospital from which to select their men from.

The Recreio play their last league fixture to-day when they meet the Athletic at King's Park, and it is more than likely that they will sustain their eighteenth defeat.

The Club, who meet St. Joseph's at home, should register a win, St. Joseph's being sorely hit by injuries to their leading players.

The following are to-day's game with the results of previous games this season given in brackets:—

"Going to wake him?" he said. She shrugged her shoulders and tasted the coffee.

"What's wrong with him?" he said.

She crooked her elbow and smiled ironically and took a deep drink of her coffee.

"Like a fish," she said.

He nodded and looked at the thin white face more closely. It seemed very young.

"Twenty-five," she said. "And he was a fine kid. But now..."

She laid her two hands just above her breasts and shook her head.

The man took the primrose from his mouth and threw it on the earth and began to drink his coffee.

The sunshine came warmly down on his face, and as he tilted back his head he felt the intent and sleepy gaze of the woman on his face too.

"Where are you going yourself?" she said.

He finished drinking and wiped his lips and stared at her, boldly admiring her.

"I want to get to Bristol and find a ship and get to Valparaiso," he said.

"I'm sick of this country. I used to know a man in Valparaiso. I made some money there at one time."

She nodded her head and took another drink of her coffee, and repeated thoughtfully:

"Valparaiso."

He drained his coffee and spat the grounds from his mouth and leaned back on one elbow.

The place where they were sitting was for a space of a foot or two without shadow, and the spring sunshine poured full on the woman's head, so that her hair seemed more than ever golden and the strength and passion in her face finer in the yellow light.

The old orange jersey had a row of buttons at the breast, but the first was missing and the second had slipped from its buttonhole. Her breast gleamed soft and fair against the dirty orange stuff, and half-unconsciously her hand moved and she did up the button afresh. But when her hand dropped back to her knees the swelling of her breast burst it apart again.

"What's it like in a place like Valparaiso?" she said suddenly.

"You know as well as I do."

She nodded.

"If the good God just thinks fit it can be wonderful. In one month in Valparaiso I made five hundred pounds. And easy, too, I made it too easy. I won't satisfy."

I thought I could go down to Buenos Aires and make a lot more. I lost every penny in a fortnight. Then I went up to Panama and on to Cuba and over to San Francisco. I made a bit of money sometimes, but I could never keep it long. Now I want to get back to Valparaiso. But if things go wrong I dare say I shall want to get back here again."

His voice was deep and easy, and there was something nonchalant and ironical and dreamy about his words. The woman sat watching him with an expression of undisturbed intensity, contemplating his dark face with a marvellous steadiness of her sleepy eyes, lost in thought; she seemed in that moment extraordinarily young, her face transformed by a moment of the strangest rapture. She looked at him candidly, enviously, and then suddenly with a glance of full-blooded passion too, her eyes wide and perfectly child-like, her bosom falling and heaving rapidly.

Watching Each Other.

They sat for a moment and watched each other like two animals. His lips gradually assumed a little sardonic smile, but she never changed her expression of marvellous intensity. The sun was warming the primroses and the swallow-bloom, and the air was filled with the soft scents of them, the smell of wood-smoke and the strong odour of earth.

The man beneath the tree stirred suddenly in his sleep and began to breathe heavily, like someone drunk, without waking.

The sound upset the woman. In a moment the fine expression on her face was lost. The sardonic, dreamy smile vanished from the lips of the man too. He stood up.

"I'll push on," he said.

The woman rose to her feet also and stretched her arms over her head with a motion of weariness. In the moment that the orange jersey and the black skirt were pulled aside, light over her rigid body, he saw that she was pregnant.

She lowered her arms with a slight, her magnificent body all languorous and heavy with its burden of strength and life. She yawned, and then smiled at him when she had finished the yawn.

"You're not so very old?" he said.

"Twenty-nine."

"And some," he guessed ironically.

"No," she shook her head.

"I believe you," he said.

He looked straight into her eyes and nodded, thinking for one moment of the sleeping man, the perambulator, her shoes and her pregnancy. She returned his look with some of the old intensity, but now as though she were thinking of something else, very far away.

"Well, I'll get," he said. "What'll you do if you get to Liverpool?"

She lifted her face a fraction towards the sun and shook her head. Instantly he looked as if he regretted bitterly having spoken the words.

"So long. Good luck for Valparaiso," she said.

"So long," he said. "Good luck."

They looked at each other for a single instant and something warm and tender flashed between them before he turned away and began to stride through the wood towards the road.

The wands of the hazel trees kept whipping back as he passed, the pollen was shaken from the thick catkins and a golden dust came falling through the beams of sunlight slanting between the trees. The sound of the swaying branches and cracking twigs grew rapidly farther and farther away, and the hazel trees trembled less and less and finally became still again. The woman sat down and rested her face in her hands and stared in thought at the primroses and the sleeping man. The last of the branches away to rest in its place again and soon the wood was silent.

TWIN SCREW TUG FOR DANUBE.

Novel Design Studied In Vienna.

The twin-screw motor tug Hugin has recently been constructed for service on the Danube and neighbouring waterways. Its design was the subject of careful model experiments at the Vienna Tank, two forms being tested and details of their lines and model results being communicated by the authors. The longer and finer form was adopted, the principal dimensions of the finished vessel being as follows:—length b.p., 18.35 m.; breadth moulded, 4.0 m.; breadth on waterline, 4.8 m.; depth moulded, 1.2 m.; draught with 800 kg. of fuel, 0.60 m.; displacement, 19.7 m³. The constituent weights are as follows: main hull, 7,940 kg.; erections, 1,630 kg.; steering gear and deck outfit, 1,250 kg.; wood, 1,140 kg.; steering gear and deck outfit, 1,250 kg.; wood, 1,140 kg.; internal fittings, 690 kg.; outfit and inventory, 770 kg.; main engines, shafting, propellers, piping and electric installation, 5,240 kg.; fuel and crew, 1,040 kg. The metacentric height of the completed vessel was 1.61 m.

Middlesex, another powerful southern contender, also opened the season auspiciously. The metropolitan team beat Hampshire by 2 wickets after being set 120 in the fourth innings to win.

R. W. V. Robins, who was forced to decline the M.C.C. invitation to visit Australia last winter owing to domestic reasons, dismissed the visitors for 88 in their second innings after Hampshire had established a lead of 31 on the first innings.

Lancashire, who last won the title in 1930, commenced their season by securing maximum points at the expense of Worcester. Watson, their opening batsman contributed 138 to the Red Rose county's total of 414 for 5. This is the highest individual score of the season, beating Andy Sandham's 169 against Hampshire. Iddon bowled well to capture 6 for 44 to dismiss Worcester for 138 and give his county an innings triumph.

Essex turned the tables on Warwickshire at Edgbaston, O'Connor displaying his best form to remain undefeated with 122 out of a total of 414 for 5. H. T. O. Smith, the Club Cricket fast bowler, took 6 for 44 in Warwickshire's first innings total of 210.

The West Indies, after their defeat at Northampton, were forced to a draw at Oxford. They required 138 to win with six wickets in hand when stumps were drawn.

F. G. H. Chalk, who concluded last season with an average of 26.00, scored 149 towards the Dark Blues' total of 287 for 7.

Revenue from this source will be handed over to the farmers to make up the difference between the present and pre-war prices.

The Bill also authorises a compensatory taxation on competing products, including imports, although President Roosevelt is understood to have opposed the taxing of imports during the tariff truce.

The Bill provides for the re-financing of farm mortgages through a $2,000,000,000 bond issue on Government and land banks.—Reuter.
